The sale of opium in China has been a vexed question for many years, and the controversies which began as far back as in 1840, when the trade was opposed at its commencement, are likely to continue till its close. Chinese officials have in later years shown a preference for the would-be assessin of the Korean Premier the home drug which has naturally led to His accomplices were sentenced to terms their bond fides being impugned, and consequently those engaged in the Indian trade have been particularly jealous lest their treaty. rights be infringed. SUPREME COURT. Monday, June 13th. IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION.

BEFORE HIS HONOUR SIE FRANCIS PIGGOTT (CHIEF JUSTICE).

INTERPERING WITH A RECRIVER. In the matter of the estate of Pang Sing Yui deceased, and in the action between Pang Chun Tong v. Pang Chung Yui and Pang Ng Shi, Mr. Slade moved that the defendants be committed to prison for contempt of Court in interfering with the management and control of Mr. J. H. Seth as receiver and manager of the A Dai shop of 29, Hing Lung Street; and that the defendants, their servents and agents, bo restrained by order and injunction of the Court from incurring any debts or debt in respect of the business of the A Dai shop, and from carrying on or in any manner interfering in or intermedding with, the said business or any of the monies, property, assets, or affairs thereof, or the management or control of Mr. Seth as receiver and manager, and from entering upon the premises of the shop until judgment in the action or until further notice.

Mr. M. W. Slade, K.C., who was instructed by Mr. Bulmer Johnson (of Messrs. Dennys & Bowley), moved on behalf of the plaintiff. The first defendant was represented by Mr. Eldon Potter, instructed by Mr. F. X. d'Almada e Castro (of Messrs. Almada & Smith), and the second by Mr. C. G. Alabaster, instructed by Mr. Christopher Wilson (of Messra. Hastings & Hastings). Mr. Slade informed the Court that what happened to the A Dai firm seemed to be what happened to so many firms in this Colouy. The original owner died and no letters of administration were taken out.

His Lordship—When did he die? Mr. Slade-Thirty-eight years ago. After his death his three sons carried on the business, and the plaintiff's father up to the time of his death was the acting manager. It would appear that in 1885 the defendant, Pang Chung Yoi, took over the management.

His Lordship-When was administration taken out? Mr. Slade-This year. Proceeding, Counsel etated that in the original action order for a receiver and manager was obtained on January 11th, this year. Mr. Seth was appointed, gave the necessary security, and took up his duties. The motions brought were motions intended to prevent interference by the two defendants with the receiver in the performance of his duties. It was a double motion applying for each of the remedies which the Court could apply in consequence of interference with a receiver. The first was committed for contempt, a strong measure to take, and the second was an injunction. The object really, in putting in the application for committal for contempt was that if his Lordship thought the circumstances justified it, it would enable an order of committed to be drawn up and left lying in th. Registry to be put inforce in case of further in terference. It was a question of machinery and all the plaintiff wanted was that the receiver and manager should be pretected. He did not want the defendants sent to prison, but their presence in the shop was becoming a menace to the due carrying on of the business. Mr. Slade then read the affidavits filed in support of the motions, which showed that the first defendant had been giving away numerous presents, and the suggestion of the plaintiff was that these presents were not made for the benefit of the A Dai shop at all. The evidence on which the first motion was applied for was general misbehaviour, and the man taking upon himself to give a series of presents. Affidavits of notice of motion had been served upon him, and in the interval plaintiff got evidence of further active steps taken by him to interfere with the shop. Mr. Potter dealt with the question of his client transferring to an opposition shop on the other side, and explained that he had been d a proper allowance.

His Lordship—He will have to leave the Wing A Tai. The question is whether we shall let him stop in the old shop.

Mr. Potter-Surely the man must get some treatment. Your Lordship will not projudge the case and say my olient will get nothing. His Lordship thought the first motion as it stood was a little thin, but at the same time i had been warranted by subsequent events. On the affidavits he was not propared to say that the defendant was not to stop in the A Dai. Mr. Potter said it was absolutely denied that his clienthad been soliciting customers, and the question before his Lordship was whether the gregation to sultivate the true love for religion affidavits were true or false. If his Lordship and due respect for all ite dogmas, concluding made the order asked he absolutely cut the with: Quando Corpus morietur, fac ut anima defendant off from all subsistence, and the latter could do nothing for himself unless the Court made an order that the receiver should pay him so much a month. The defendant was willing to leave the A Tai if he got an allowance.

His Lordship-I think he ought to get a aubsistence allowance, and I also think it would be better for the A Dsi shop that he should remain there. That point I must go into. The matter was further considered in chambers in the afternoon.

IN SUMMARY JURISDICTION. BEFORE HIS HONOUR ME. F. A. HAZELAND (Acting Pulsne Judge).

ALLEGED FALSE IMPRISONMENT The trial of the action brought by Wong Fu Ng, compradore, against Captain A. A. Johnson, of the s.s. Shut On, was concluded before his Honour and the following jury :- J. A. T. Plummer (foreman), J. A. Hunter and D. Cooper. The claim was for $1,000 for slieged assault and false imprisonment,

Mr. Eldon Potter, instructed by Mr. Davidson (of Mesers. Hastings & Hastings), appeared for the plaintiff, while defendant was represented by Mr. C. G. Alabaster, instructed by Mr. W E. L. Shenton (of Messrs. Descon, Looker & Deagon), After Counsel had addressed the Court the jury found against the defendant on the three points submitted to them, and his Lordship awarded the plaintiff $500 damages, but granted a stay of execution pending appeal.

JAPANESE LACQUER.

Mr. James Orange, the well-known Hongkong architect, the public his friends under a debt of gratitude by his dainty and charming publication bearing the title given above. He modestly describes it as "a small collection of Japanese lacquer made by James Orange, " but though it may not vie with some of the collections amassed by gentlemen who have spent the greater part of their lives in the Land of the Rising Sun it certainly is better than the ordinary busy professional or commercial man hope to acquire here. Guided by a good taste in his early purchases, and supplementing this by useful information gained from competent authorities on the ancient art, he has acquired a sound judgment and a good experience which are seen to advantage in the collection which is considered representative of periods and makers.

The author precedes a short history of the art of lacquer by a quotation from "Things Japanese," by В. H. Chamberlain. "Appreciation of lacquer is a taste that has to be acquired, grows upon one and places the best lacquer in the category of almost sacred things. To show a really fine piece casually to a newcomer or to send it home, as a gift to one of the uncultivated natives of Europe or America, is, as the Japanese proverb says, like giving guineas to a cat. He will take it up for an instant, just glance at it, say, 'What a pretty little thing!' and put it down again, imagining it to be worth at most a couple of dollars. Not improbably it cost a hundred, and was the outcome of years of patient toil and marvellous art." He afterwards indicates that the art of lacquering is supposed to have been introduced, like so many of the Japanese arts, from China, and the first mention of lacquer is about B.C. 392. The next notice is in A.D. 645, when lacquered articles were received by the Government in lieu of taxes. The industry then practically became a necessity, and after the tenth century the manufacture of lacquer became more elaborate and more minute, the nobles beginning to use articles of furniture covered with gold lacquer. About the middle of the fifteenth century a marked change took place in the style of gold lacquer. Previously the decorations had consisted for the most part of floral designs, but now landscapes, figures and architectural subjects came into fashion. During the period from 1603 to 1854 the art received a great impetus, and an enormous quantity of good work was done, much of which was unfortunately destroyed during the Restoration War of 1868.

Mr. Orange then goes on to describe the materials used in manufacture, the manufacture and the various kinds of lacquer work, all of which will be read with interest by those who appreciate the beautiful art of lacquering. The frontispiece, a representation of black and gold lacquer is a marvellously successful experiment in photo printing on gold, and the fifty pages of beautiful collo type illustrations give the book a considerable value. It was compiled in 1907 for private circulation, but many requests for copies and the suggestion of a leading art conncisseur of Tokyo led to the reprint under review. It can be had from Messrs. Kelly & Walsh.

A PORTUGUESE CELEBRATION.

The very Rev. was willing to leave the Wing A Tai if he got Father Costa Nunes, Vicar General of Macao, elivered an appropriate sermon, taking for the text of his exordium Feoit mirabilia in vita sua. He enlogised the glorious deeds of the Saint during his apostolic life and in his main discourse the preacher alluded with brilliant eloquency to the many reforms made by the Saint which caused him to be regarded as the first refermer of the thirteenth century, who by his preaching and miracles defeated the heretics, Albigences and Arians and converted them to the Faith. The preacher's enthusiasm kindled as he proceeded to compare the 13th century with the present one when religion is greatly neglected and indifferently exercised, and in a striking peroration he recommended the condonetun, Paradin gloria!. His Lordship Bishop Pozzoni, assisted by the Rev. Fathers Agostini and Leung, officiated at the Benediction of the Holy Sacrament.—Contributed.

FUNERAL OF CUSTOMS OFFICER MARTIN.

The funeral of Mr. Martin, an officer of the Imperial Maritime Customs, stationed at Canton, who was fatally shot on the river steamer Kweng Tung, took place on the 7th instant. It was largely attended by Europeans and Chinese, who assembled to pay a last tribute of respect to the young officer who sacrificed his life to duty's call. After a short service at the French Church the coffin, which was loaded with wreaths, was borne by pallbearers to the bund. A guard of honour from the Police Taotai's guards and the 8th Yin regiment preceded the mournful procession, while at the rear walked representatives of the Foreign Consuls and numerous residents of the Shameen. The remains were then conveyed by launch to the cemetery opposite the Macso fort, friends and mourners following in other launches. The Chinese Authorities are said to be sulogising the decessed's heroic action, and there is talk of posthumous honours.

The appended report by Mr. B. B. C. Boss, District Officer at Taipo, will be read with interest:-

During the last few weeks private prayers for rain have been effered throughout the Territory. Anyone who happened to walk through the district might have observed that the hilltons were crowned with little knots of men who with banners, crackers and gongs were offering up prayers for rain. All amateur supplications proved, however, unavailing, and the elders of Ha Tour collected money and obtained the necessary permits for erecting matcheds and carrying on religious services. The services for rain began at Ha Tsun on the 20th day of the 4th moon and lasted for three days.

The reply was so clear that no one in the Territory had any doubt that rain would fall on the 25th day of the moon. The forecast of the Nam Mo was wonderfully accurate. On that day 41 inches of rain fell at Tai Po, while during the previous seven months there had been less than seven inches.

I am disappointed to see that no mimic making of rain took place. The pouring out of water under a black cloth is a feature of many rain coromonies. In this case we have instances of the black cloth, imitative representations of the rain producing forces, thunder wind and

The steamer Protector was sent over to Olongapo by one of the large steamship and dredging companies of Hongkong to assist in floating the Dewey in case any outside assistance is needed. It is hoped by the naval authorities, however, that the work of floating

It has been authoritatively stated that the Dewey has not sunk more than 18 inches during the past fortnight and that is due to the fact that she has been raised several feet on the opposite side. It is understood the pumps she has now installed will be able to lift her if there are no large openings to the sea or any great

Mr. Kirby, a farmer, of Emswell Wold, three miles beyond Driffield, awakened about 5.30 by the storm, went out and heard the terrible roaring of rushing water round the foot of the hills coming from the direction of Cowlandale. A NEW WOMAN IN JAPAN.

It would seem as if the East bears testimony, as well as the West, to the ancient truth that career of distinction or usefulness for a woman, however original or however gifted, can equal marriage in happiness when the marriage is a love-union and a perfect match. There has lately been published in England and America a translation of the warrior romances of Mme. Yei Theodora Ozaki, better known as the author of that classic in Asiatic folk-lore, Japanese Fairy Book," and Mesers. Constable have given the new book in English the title of "Warriors of Old Japan and Other Stories." The stories in themselves are quaint and brave and marvellous in their exaggerated heroism but it is the personality of the author tha AN ANGLO-JAPANESE MARRIAGE An example of the happy married woman, she herself sprang from a most unhappy union Her father, Baron Saburo Ozaki, descended from the ancient samurai, was a member of the Japanese House of Peers, and a Privy Councillor The comparative leisure suggested by the report of the realm, but a man of modern views, who was one of the first of his countrymen to repair to England to see what it could teach him trans-continental railway is still some distance In England he made the acquaintence of Bathis Catherine, daughter of William Morrison, well-known linguist and scholar, and brother c Alexander Morrison, who is famous for his translations of the great German philosophers and historians. Five years later they parted, however, through sheer incompatibility between Western temperament and Eastern traditions: even traditions modified by progress The three children of the marriage remained in England with their mother, but when sixteen years of age his second daughter. Yei, was ordered out East by her father, and obeyed the He found her truly Japanese in appearance and was delighted with her charm and grace and accomplishments, but she failed to bring about the parental reconciliation sentimental readers will perceive to be the ideal ending of this story from real life. She fell in with her father's view that life for her in future was to be wholly Japanese, but when he made a marriage alliance for her she revolted, out of a natural desire not to repeat the experience of her mother. He himself had married again, and there were younger children in the family growing up around her, so she decided to move away and become independent by maintaining herself as : teacher of English.

A FAMOUS NOVELIST'S TRIBUTE.

In this way Yei Ozaki met Mrs. Hugh Fraser when the latter's husband was British Minister in Tokyo, and formed one of the potent friendships of her life. When the Frasers returned to Europe. Yei came with them, and during part of the next few years was occupied in the house of Mrs. Fraser's brother, the late Marion Crawford, the novelist. He employed her as an amanuensis, and gave her the task of cataloguing his library, giving her testimonials later for the admirable way in which she had done the work. He also discerned literary ability in her, from the stories with which she used to regale his daughters from memory, and urged her to lecture on and publish them. Italy charmed all during this period, and she cultivated her voice and her guitarplaying to much effect; but her native land recalled her, and she undertook the tuition in English of a class of men and boys, living meanwhile in a half-ruined Buddhist temple. She began to write for English magazines and reviews, occupied herself with native philanthropic movements and resolved to clear Western minds of their misconceptions regarding Japanese woman

In a letter to her friend, Mrs. Fraser, she described herself as a happy woman rejoicing in every phase of official life, in Court and out of it, but most of all in the privacy of her own home and the company of her baby daughter. She concludes her letter: "If you must write about us, teli people about Yukio (her husband) -he is so good and great. I have no wish to be mentioned apart from him." The letter was addressed to "Trs. Fraser, who incorporates it in her charming _atroduction to the book, and it is upon this with its pleasant pen-pictures of Japanese home life that we have drawn.

RUBBER NOTES.

PHILIPPINE BURDER. An American journal has the following to say concerning the building up of the rubber industry in the Philippines:

The reported consolidation of the rubber interests in Ceylon has caused some of the manufacturers of rubber in this country to hope for a reduction, or at least a halt in the advance, of the price of raw rubber. Within the last year Brazilian rubber has increased greatly in price. British interests control the Brazil supply to a large extent.

The obvious opportunity for Americans seems to be the development of rubber growing in the Philippines. Rubber in Ceylon is comparatively new as a commercial commodity. Teasucceeded coffee as the chief product of the island when a parasite devastated the coffee plantations, and rubber growing on a large scale was undertaken only a few years ago. It is reasonable to believe the reports that the Philippines contain a great deal of land that will grow rubber. If Ceylon and the Malay States, with a similar climate and somewhat similar soil, will grow rubber so readily there seems to be no reason to doubt the reports of investigators as to the possibilities of rubber upon the archipelage into the possession of which we have come and which we are likely to retain. What misfortunes the Philippines may bring us no one can foretell, but they should provide us with rubber, which we import at the rate of $30,000 s year, if the experts who have gone over the ground are not greatly mistaken.

CHANGE FOR RUBBER PLANTERS.

If report speaks truly Brazil should prove veritable Tom Tiddler's ground for some enterprising rubber planters. It is stated that the Federal Government of Brazil have under consideration a proposal to offer to such people as are willing to plant at least a million trees. free land and exemption from taxes and from export duties on rubber for a long period, the Government to participate in the profits of the enterprise. Further the Government is credited with the intention to make a determined effort to develop rubber exploitation and planting according to the most modern and scientific methods, and the British Acting Consul-General at Rio de Joneiro mentions that a Brazilian rubber trade newspaper states that the Government of the State of Para have sent a message to the State Congress suggesting the rubber planters should be encouraged to start cultivatng in regions more easily accessible to the coast. The Government, it is satisfactory to learn, is said to be showing itself alive to the necessity of regulating the rubber output by fixing the period in which the first tapping shall take place and the height of the trees ab ve ground,

PAHANG CONSOLIDATED AND RUBBER

At an extraordinary general meeting of the Pahang Consolidated Company held recently at Winchester House, resolutions were submitted for the increase of the capital to £500,000 by the creation of 1.000,000 additional ordinary shares of 5s. each. Mr. J. Champneys presided. He said their proposals were a sequel to the meeting in December. At that time he referred to Mr. Frecheville's proposed visit to the property, and he told them if this report should prove favourable the company had friends who would aid them with money for such development of the mine as he Frecheville) might advise, even to the extent of the sum mentioned by Mr. Pawle, namely, £70.000. Since then they had Mr. Frecheville's report, and the directors had had the advantage of interviews with him. They were strongly of opinion that his suggestions should be carried This would involve a probable ultimate expenditure of £70,000. As to rubber, he (the speaker) told them in December that 2.000 trees had come into full bearing, that Javanese coolies would be brought over in connection with the tapping of the trees, that, in view of the satisfactory growth of the estate. it was proposed, if possible, largely to in orease the acreage, and that application had already been made to the Government. Meanwhile they had had the extraordinary outburst of rubber, and they would be losing their opportunity if they did not take the utmost advantage of the suitable land adjacent to their present plantations, and of that lying alongside their railway. After detailing their proposals in this respect, he said, to meet the expenditure on the further development of the mines, the considerable extension of the rubber plantations, and to pay off certain existing liabilities, the directors recommended that the capital should be increased so as to provide £125,000. The passing of the resolutions would assure the company that amount, for it had been all underwritten, and upon terms most favourable to the shareholders, for there would be no cash consideration, the whole sum, without any deduction for commission, being payable into the coffers of the com-This should encourage the shareholders, for it showed, in spite of the past vicissitudes. that confidence was still strongly felt in regard to their future, as the only advantage that could come to the underwriters would be shared by the shareholders, and would come from the enhanced value of their property. He moved to his strictures, the resolutions were carried.

PREEHOLD ESTATES IN JAVA. The Second Chamber of the States General discussed on May 10th the Bill for the purchase of the private estate of Kandanghauer in Java. M. The statutary general meeting was held recently at Winchester House. Mr. Harold S. Seldon, who presided, said that the company was formed chiefly to foster or promote rubber enterprices. There had just been a severe "shake out" in the rubber market due to the number of special settlements which had taken place, and in the shares of many of the companies there had undoubtedly been the wildest gamble. The slump in prices had been helped by the fall in the price of the raw article, but if they looked membered: that the Chancellor of the Exchequer at the quotation of good shares to-day he thought they would find many tempting purchases. "Previous to using Cutiours I suffered intense pain for three years from eczama on my lag from the knee down. It begen from a small spet the size of a penay watery way over the ankles. It spread rapidly to the knee. It looked like an cruption, the skin red and inflamed and covered with a coating of scales.

The leg became very swellen, with a terrible itching and burning sensation. In this way I suffered for the three years. I assure you I have tried all kinds of remedies and consulted several madical fact I tried almost every kind of treatment one could mention, but all to no avail. My disease was as bad or worse than ever until I tried Cutlours. After a few applications I felt relief and continued until cured. Such a heavy drop in prices was not, however, at all likely to occur. He afterwards stated that the company's investments did not show any depreciation. "A ROSE BY ANY OTHER, NAME," The Straits Times is requested to state that the Malacca Sungei Bahru properties are to be floated by Mr. W. M. Mr. Sime desires it to be quite clearly understood that the properties are one and the same. If opportunity is given, we may express an opinion on the new financing when the pros-

THE SPIRTUAL INFLUENCE OF WOMEN.

Goethe, in a colebrated passage in "Torquate Tasso," has expressed the thought that man stands mainly for initiative and progress, and woman for all that makes for the conservation of society. Without denying the corentive powers of woman, we may hold it true that from the earliest times it has been the influence of woman which has made social life a possibility, and that this influence has been at bottom a spiritual influence. If woman has captured man by her physical charms, she has largely maintained her empire over him by her spiritual qualities, and the outward and visible instrument of this suzorainty has ever been one and the same—a little child. The words "a little child shall lead them" are true of all parents, whether at the bottom or at the summit of the scale of civilization. It is, after all, through the child that to the world has been revealed that high and splendid thing—maternal love. And even when the child is lacking, it every normal woman, expressed in countless ways and divers fashions, that has been, and still

It has produced in the soman a spirit of patient endurance, of self-denial, and sympathy which have made her the great ethical and spiritual factor in the ascent of man. But if history teaches us one thing, it is that the inward light must be kept burning brightly, for once woman neglects to cultivate those spiritual gifts which are peculiarly hers, then, although the results may not always be immediately apparent, she is bound in the long run to lose her greatest power over the heart and mind of man. Ruskin has said, "The Soul's armour is never well set to the heart unless a woman's hand has braced it! and it is only when She braces it leosely that the Honour of Manhood fails!"

The imagination of the ancient world was struck by the devotion of Alcestis, who counted her life as nothing if but through her death her husband might have life. In her parting words lie the keynote of her character-

And thou, my husband, mayst with honour boast

Thou hast been wedded to a virtuous wife; And you, my children, glory in your mother. To her it was but a simple act, this laying down of her life; but what must have been the quiet strength and steadfastness of a woman who could so quietly perform such an act of selfsacrifice, with no hope of aught save that of going out into eternal night? And so it has mente of great ethical and spiritual value. come to pass that when we think of utter selflessness, Alcestis rises before us as the very the virtues, but it is an old lesson that charity embodiment of that supreme virtue.

The same passionate unselfishness distinguishes Antigone, who risks all, even death itself, should be one of the fundamentals of every life, to give the spirit of her fallen brother peace, and into whose mouth Sophocles has put the immortal line that sums up the world function of woman :--

Born not to share in hate, but share in love. With Christianity came the canonization of motherhood and the definite recognition of the pre-eminently womanly virtues alongside of, and even above, the masculine virtues. Henceforth the contribution of woman's work towards the spiritual uplifting of the world was placed for ever beyond dispute. The long roll of virgin martyrs is an undying testimony to the spirit of feminine self-sacrifice and devotion to the service of mankind. The deaths that they died for their faith were but the culminating act in the lives that they lived for others. These servitors of the new religion dedicated all their unconscious maternal instincts to the "mother. ing" of the community. For them the Madonna, the Virgin without sin, was not merely one of the symbols of their worship, but the inspiration and interpretation of their daily thoughts and

The number of such women is legion. We may cite in early times St. Catherine of Alexandria, and in the Middle Ages St. Catherine of Siena and St. Elizabeth of Hungary, in each of whom, apart from great intellectual gifts or high position, it was the personality of the saint combined with a deep insight and sympathy that impressed the imagination of her own generation. Of course in judging of the times one must allow for the difference of ideals. Asceticism was then considered the highest state to which men or woman could attain. But apart from this the lessons of their lives are just as pertinent for us in this twentieth century as they were for their contemporaries. They established the creed that devotion and charity should be the mainsprings of woman's life, however much the work to which she may apply herself may vary through the centuries. In this we see the true "mother spirit" at work, for the true "mother spirit" cannot rest with ministering only to her own; it is only content when it can spread its wings and help all those with whom it comes in contact. So it has been throughout the ages, but it is impossible for this spirit to thrive and grow as it should, if it is never given adequate nonrishment, and it is an imperative duty laid on the woman of to-day that her inner life should be sustained and fed by ethical and spiritual food just as much as her material wants are satisfied daily. How and in what manner, must be left to the direction of each woman. If she fails to maintain these high standards it is inevitably reflected in all her surroundings, for, if a woman's standard is low, then insensibly the man's standard, too, is lowered, and so the vicious circle extends. A wise thinker has said of women, "La société vaut ce qu'elles valent." 4817

The besetting sin of many a woman to-day in philanthropic work is that the work itself appears to her as the be-all and end-all of the good she can possibly accomplish. The result is that the work itself tends to become a mechanical process-highly finished, if you will, but mechanical. If this occurs her special usefulness is at an end, for a man or a machine would then perform the work as well as she does. The truth is that in thus unduly glorifying the work she forgets the real reason that led her to take it up, and so everything and everybody with whom she comes in contract are the poorer, for her work has lost its life-giving touch. It has became a routine, an empty ritual, a "service" from which all sense of service is absent. Work without the saving element, of personality is but a palo shadow compared with the vivid sunlight of the woman who by the mere magnetism and force of her spirituality leaves an impress on the minds of those around her. They may often forget the valuable commonsense advice she gave, but what is unforget table is the deep spirituality that dictated it, that moves them still, whenever they think of it, though she has long since passed from their

In these modern days we are apt to be very scornful of sentimentality, but in our very scorn we are likely to con found with it that closely allied, but profoundly different, quality—sentiment. Now a certain account of sentiment is indispensable to us all. It is the colour element in our lives, which otherwise would be dark and groy. We all have something of the child in us. We appreciate deeply those little attentions which are from time to time bestowed upon us, symbols as they are, or should be, of consideration. This is the real raison d'élre of courtesy and gentle, bearing. Yet many of the best women of to-day are inclined to think that it is mawkish and looble to make use in their work of what is, after all, one of their greatest gifts—their sympathy—the most natural of all their instincts, the source and fountain-head of all their spirituality. No doubt it is not easy, when engaged in any kind of work, to avoid becoming callous and hardened, and especially is this the case in much philanthropic and perhaps educational work.

Thus it often seems, when we have followed our natural impulses, that the result has been only disaster and discouragement. No wonder that the woman engaged in such work is tempted to turn a deaf ear to the dictates of her finer feelings and fessilize into a cold and rather hard personality, who follows nothing but her reason. And what is the result? Not increased efficiency; for the woman has deliberately, if unwittingly, robbed herself of the chief magic of her influence. It is the perfect balance of head and heart that makes, and must make, the power of the modern is that very love, which is the birthright of woman. Formerly the heart was considered the essential factor; to-day we run the risk of suffering from unduly glorifying the head; is, the keynote of much that is brightest and but the perfect woman must fully develop both sides of her nature. Neither, indeed, must assume complete control, for, if either does, then complete failure awaits their possessor. Yet, when all is said and done, there is no doubt that the woman whose rower is greatest is she who cultivates her spirituality. Such spirituality should permeate through and through a woman's daily life, for without it she cannot attain the high estate for which she has been destined by God and man. Man has always sought for it in woman, and, when he has found it not, then indeed has woman failed in her principal and primal mission.

The imperious need of the day is ideals. At no time has there ever been a greater need for ethical and spiritual ideals than now, when on all sides the material things of life are apt to assume undue prominence. The mere striving after ideals themselves is of inestimable value, not only to the individual soul, but to the generations yet to come; for a nation, to be truly great, must always have high ideals and it is the women who mould those ideals. The Martha in a woman's nature must be apportioned to the Mary; there must be the fountain continually gushing forth life giving streams, and there can be no fountain if there be no spring to feed it. What the spring should be it is not the place here to discuss; but there are many things about us in our daily lives which, if rightly used, can be made the instru-

Faith and hope are amongst the greatest of is a greater: not merely charity in its most restricted sense, but that catholic spirit which and which regards all things not from the standpoint of "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" but from that point of view which "calls nothing common or unclean." The lesson of tolerance, which is a sort of moral savoir faire, is one of the most difficult for woman to learn, but it is also one of the most essential. And so, when we regard the immense responsibility which is cast apon women by the possession of those very spiritual gifts, which in their essence are the crown of their lives, we realize more than ever the necessity that they should keep their aims sublime and their eyes erect, even though their hands may shake and fail.-The
